In this workshop participants will be introduced to the poured paint technique for creating watercolour paintings. This method is similar to Batik and writing a pysanka – we will work in stages whereby areas are blocked out before pouring each colour of paint on the paper. Friday evening will be spent exploring the process and starting 2 small studies. The process will continue on Saturday. While waiting for paint to dry between colours, the class will also experiment with various other techniques and watercolour tips. Each participant will complete a finished framed piece that they can take home or add to the display wall in the gallery. Basic supplies are included in the fee but you can always bring your own. Suggested supplies: watercolour paints (from a tube), watercolour paper, Masking Fluid, an old small paintbrush for the masking fluid, a couple of regular paint brushes (1 small, 1 med), masking tape. Optional: a spray bottle for water. Bring a lunch on Saturday.
